To allow for simplicity of use and a streamlined user experience some functions will be handled outside the system

To keep the digital auction solution as simple and easy to use as possible, we have designed a user interface, where it is only necessary to press one button – the bid-button.

Hence, it is not possible to cancel a bid in the interface.

Should you have any queries regarding your purchases or interest in purchasing additional lots, please contact our auctioneer team on juneauction@kopenhagenfur.com.

Any mistakes have to be communicated via Zoom within a timeframe of 10 lots.

For your convenience, digital images of showlots will once again be available for inspection

For the June auction, images have been grouped into one file per type. You can browse through each type by using the arrow keys.

The images have been improved in the following ways:

- Pictures allow for inspection of hair length
- Lot numbers have been integrated into the pictures.

You can access the digital inspection site on:

<https://www.kopenhagenfur.com/auction/digital-skin-inspection/>

If the lot is part of a string, additional lots in the string will be displayed.

As a new thing, you will be able to see who won former lots in the string

What if others bid the same as me at the same time?

To ensure fairness for all our global buyers the solution considers all bids that come in within a set timeframe to be equal.

The auctioneer single-handedly decides who gets the bid and afterwards it will be possible to bid again.

How does a lot close?

How do I buy multiple lots in a string?

If you have won a lot that is part of a string, you will get the opportunity to buy the remainder lots in the string. It is not possible to drop, meaning

1. The price for the remainder lots will be the same as the hammer price for the first lot in the string
2. You can decide how many lots in the string you want to purchase without the risk that someone else might overbid you.

If you choose not to buy all the lots in the string, unsold lots will be released for sale with a starting price that equals the hammer price for the sold lot.
